You could play a musical instrument! Players in Boston Symphony Orchestra definitely do not play by themselves. Years of practice made these musicians.

Will Hudgins plays mallet instruments and the Bass Drum in the percussion section. The Bass Drum can be solemn or arresting and you can be sure it will be noticed.

The bold trumpet is one of the most exciting of all the instruments. Here, Tom Roif is creating a portrait made up of hundreds of notes, astounding the audience.

The French Horn, played by Gus Sebring has a heraldic, romantic sound. For all it's golden tones, this instrument has a mind of its own, and if you chose to play it, you treat it with respect.

The Clarinet is played by Tom Martin is known for creating extraordinary moods with his instrument. Some jazzy, sometimes silky, sometimes his performances are breathtaking.